Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Saturday 11 Sep 2021

UK Outlook for Thursday 16 Sep 2021 to Saturday 25 Sep 2021:
Likely largely dry in the south on Thursday, with the risk of a few showers. However, outbreaks of rain, potentially heavy, with stronger winds arriving across the northwest and spreading south-eastwards, bringing a spell of rain to many areas of the UK on Friday. Through the weekend and beyond, there is a signal for mostly fine and dry weather across southern and eastern areas, with variable amounts of cloud and sunny spells, but with the risk of overnight fog patches. Towards the northwest, perhaps cloudier with the chance of rain at times, which may gradually spread south-eastwards to other areas. Overall, temperatures are likely to be near to above average for the time of the year, but with the chance of some cool nights particularly in the north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.